FIRST LADY OF CRIME

Steven Bochco, the creator of hit American series such as NYPD Blue, has influenced a generation of British television producers. But Bochco once told me that one of the major influences on him was Lynda La Plante's Prime Suspect. It certainly changed La Plante's life, although the real turning point came earlier when, as a little-known actress, she was cast as a prostitute in an episode of The Gentle Touch. She thought the part was so badly written that she reckoned she could do better herself. And did.

Although her first TV drama was Widows, in 1983, it was Prime Suspect, in 1991, that propelled her into the super-league. 'But I don't own Prime Suspect,' she tells me. 'I created that character, fought tooth and nail for that character, but when I disagreed with what they wanted to do with her, they said, "Fine, we'll bring in another writer." That was a very hard slap in the face, and I said, "It's not going to happen again." So I went through the slow process of learning how to form my own production company.'

The control she now exerts over her own productions, not to mention her continued success as a writer, has made her enormously powerful, and of course very rich. She has a grand home in Surrey, and another in the Hamptons, on Long Island, near New York City.

All of which is a long way removed from her childhood, in wartime Crosby, on the outskirts of Liverpool. Yet she remembers her early years with affection. 'Even as a child I was fascinated by crime,' she says. 'Some women are asked what they enjoyed as a child, and they say Little Women. I say The Untouchables, with Eliot Ness.'

Little did she know, while watching The Untouchables, that she herself would one day revolutionise the way crime was dealt with on TV. 'Before Prime Suspect nobody ever went into the incident room, the forensics labs, the mortuary,' she says, adding with engaging immodesty, 'I have to do a tremendous amount of research, because whatever I do will be copied within months.'

'As soon as a script of mine is finished it goes off to the police, to the pathology lab, to the barristers. It has their fingers all over it. If they say, "You can't do that. It would take four hours to get that result and you've got there in minutes," I say, "right". I defer to them on all things. And if they ask me, as they did recently, to give out commendations to Metropolitan Police officers, there is always a trade-off. I say, "I'll give your awards but what will you give me?" They say, "OK, wanna see our new database?"'

Britain, she adds with feeling, has the finest police force in the world. And she should know.

LA CONFIDENTIAL

Ground control

Sven Wombwell is not yet a household name, but he is hoping to be. Already this 26-year-old Essex boy, a rabid Arsenal fan and keen rock guitarist, is being labelled as the Jamie Oliver of gardening. Who knows, perhaps Oliver will one day be known as the Sven Wombwell of the kitchen.

Wombwell, who owes his highly fashionable first name to his Swedish mother, is the presenter of Columbia Road Gardens, a UK Style makeover series with a difference, in that the first half of each show is filmed at the Columbia Road flower and plant market in Hackney, east London. There, Wombwell and his makeover subject choose their materials, and then the presenter, on his own, sets to work.

'It's hard work, but it does prove that one person can do it,' he says. He certainly has Jamie Oliver-like enthusiasm for his subject, which began to sprout, he says, when he and his three brothers were each given a patch of their grandfather's vegetable garden.

So what, I ask, is his own garden like? He looks slightly coy. 'I don't actually have one. I live in a flat. And the last thing I want to do when I get home is gardening. But having said that, I am looking for a place with a garden.'

OK, so if he did have one, what would it look like? 'It would have lots of modern-looking things, architectural plants like banana trees, and Australian tree ferns and bamboos. I love bamboos. They're cool. I love the way they move in the wind, the sound they make.' And what of the things he doesn't love? What, in fact, sets his teeth on edge? 'Rambling roses,' he says. 'I'm not an English country garden type. But I try to give people what they want.' Columbia Road Gardens, UK Style, weeknights from Wednesday 28th, 10.30pm

As great female acting roles go, Princess Abricot Crumble is arguably not quite up there with Lady Macbeth, or even Lady Windermere. But Malandra Burrows is not complaining. The 34-year-old former Emmerdale star, who played Kathy Glover, formerly Merrick, formerly Tate, formerly Bates, for 17 years, is delighted to be booked for pantomime this Christmas – Jack and the Beanstalk at the Bradford Alhambra.

She left Emmerdale last October and, unlike her former colleague Jaqueline Pirie, who departed as Tina Dingle only to fetch up in Coronation Street as Linda Sykes, is not looking for another soap part. On the other hand, she is not turning her back on the genre altogether. Burrows is the host of a new 28-part gameshow on Challenge? called Soap Addicts.

Which begs the obvious question, is she addicted herself? 'I do love soaps,' she says. 'I like the way that they survive and flourish even when they lose great characters. Like when EastEnders lost Den and Ange, but they keep turning themselves around and over.'

Her first love, she says, was Dallas. 'I learned to boo watching JR Ewing. But I've watched all the British ones, and I don't mind turning to the Australian ones when I get fed up with the British weather. I suppose what I like most about soaps are the feisty women, and the great partnerships, like Sue Johnston and Ricky Tomlinson [Sheila and Bobby Grant] years ago in Brookside. They were just fantastic.'

Burrows comes from Liverpool, and owes her exotic first name to the more prosaic names of her parents, who decided to combine Malcolm and Sandra.

'It's what you might name a dog,' she says, 'but it has been great in the business. It's good to have an unusual name.'

Her first soap job was on Brookside. 'I played Dave Easter's girlfriend at the time of the siege,' she recalls. 'Funnily enough, he's now in Family Affairs. In those days soap was not as huge as it is now, but I do remember asking [Brookside creator] Phil Redmond why he didn't make films, and he said, "Soap is more significant in people's lives." I think that's true.'

What does she remember most fondly about her long stint in Emmerdale? 'I loved my weddings. There were four weddings and lots of funerals. The producers had a habit of pairing me with male actors who wanted to leave, so after a wedding there was very often a funeral. I wasn't very good at those. The [Christmas 1993] plane crash episode sticks in my mind most. That was phenomenal.'

Lord of THE WING

Filming the convoluted, behind-the-scenes manoeuvring of life in the White House can be laborious. But John Spencer, who plays Leo McGarry, thinks it pays off. He tells Fiona Morrow why series three of The West Wing is the best ever

JOHN SPENCER is one of the most powerful men on television. As Chief of Staff Leo McGarry in the political drama series The West Wing, Spencer is right-hand man to the President of the United States. It's a tough job, but somebody has to do it, right?

'It's great, isn't it?' Spencer grins. 'You're just not supposed to have this much fun working.' Season two ended with President Bartlet (Martin Sheen) admitting to the American public that he suffers from Multiple Sclerosis, and season three begins with him announcing his decision to seek re-election.

'It's our best season so far,' comments Spencer. 'We've really hit our stride.' Although Leo is still top dog within the inner sanctum of the White House group of advisers, he's having to work a little bit harder to get his own way. Not convinced that they can bring the American public on side by themselves, the Bartlet administration has brought in a campaign manager – played by Ron Silver.

'I love it,' says Spencer. 'Working with Ron is just great, but also, now Leo has a foil, someone who really challenges him. It makes the role even meatier.'

Emmy-nominated two years running for his performance as Leo, Spencer can hardly believe television can be this good. 'It was a worry to me,' he explains, 'that television would make me a lazier actor – that I would begin to take my craft for granted.' No such luck: 'The thing about The West Wing is that Aaron Sorkin's writing is so brilliant, you stretch yourself constantly to develop your character.'

The writing is so good, in fact, that the cast are not allowed to deviate from the script. 'There is a woman whose entire job it is to make sure we are word perfect,' Spencer laughs. 'And some of those lines are difficult. Politics is not my subject – I have to take time to learn the policies behind the script so that as Leo, it's as if I have the information right there at my fingertips.'

Then there are the famous walk-and-talks; the scenes in which the cast march through the labyrinthine corridors of the White House engaging in trademark tongue-twisting dialogue. 'They are exhilarating – the momentum is incredible,' smiles Spencer. 'The average number of takes on one of those big walk-and-talks is about 17, to get it all right.'

The campaign trail

What challenges face the President and his team as election fever hits The West Wing? Words: Fiona Morrow

President Josiah 'Jed' Bartlet (Martin Sheen)

Having announced that he's been hiding his MS, President Bartlet has a lot of work to do to secure the Democratic nomination for another term. Meanwhile, he also has to persuade the First Lady (Stockard Channing) that running for office again is a good idea.

Deputy Chief of Staff Josh Lyman (Bradley Whitford)

Leo's deputy, Josh has a brilliant mind but he's hotheaded. He was shocked at the President's news and now he has to put up with interference from a new campaign team. Worse still, Josh learns he may have put the entire campaign in jeopardy.

Communications Director Toby Ziegler (Richard Schiff)

With a razor-sharp, dry-as-dust wit, Toby is Bartlet's quiet, but deadly weapon. His work is his whole life, so to find that the President has lied sends him into absolute turmoil - his anger begins to affect his ability to do his job and his judgment is called into question.

Deputy Communications Director Sam Seaborn (Rob Lowe)

Sam is an intellectual heavyweight hiding behind a handsome smile. He's been dealing with his father's infidelities, so he feels doubly betrayed by the President's revelations and is struggling to keep his emotions in check.

Press Secretary CJ Cregg (Allison Janney)

As the White House's public spokesperson, CJ takes the flak and dishes the spin brilliantly. Following the revelations about Bartlet, however, she makes a terrible gaffe and is considering resigning - but not before she's given the President a piece of her mind.

"But that's like maybe three or four scenes as written and we'll do it in one take, and you can't cut into a walk-and-talk so it has to be perfect. If you screw up a line halfway in you have to stop and start again.

"There was one scene in particular in which the camera guy had to walk up two flights of steps backwards while filming Richard [Schiff], Brad [Whitford] and myself. Well, Richard and I were huffing and puffing a little bit, but this guy was carrying this huge Steadicam and it was too challenging for him - at times he had to put it down, drag it. It was kinda scary - I thought he was going to finish himself off."

He pauses to flash a wry smile and adds, "I mean it's good television, but the ultimate sacrifice? That's taking loyalty a little too far!"

FACTUAL

Relative values

When the Brennans agreed to adopt each other's roles for a month in front of the cameras, little did they predict the outcome. Tina Ogle meets the family

WHILE THE DEBATE over its authenticity continues, reality TV is still all the rage and this month Discovery dips its toes in the roiling waters with Topsy Turvy.

The three-part series sees the Brennans - dad Mick, mum Carol, 20-year-old Kayne, 16-year-old Kyla and 14-year-old Kerisha - turn over their south London home to a camera crew as they indulge in a spot of role reversal for a month.

Kayne, a car salesman, becomes a courier van driver and head of the house. He must pay the bills, discipline the others and be a role model. That he fails spectacularly at all three only adds to the fun. Mick, normally a black cab driver (being under 21, Kayne wasn't allowed to drive a black cab), takes over his son's job at the car dealership and relinquishes all financial responsibility; Kayne's friend takes Mick out shopping for clubbing gear and he hits the night spots.

Meanwhile, Carol, who normally runs the household, joins daughter Kyla at school and struggles with four A/S levels and ballet. Kyla continues with her studies while doing the housework. Kerisha continues as she is but must face being told what to do by her siblings.

What ensues is fascinating, funny and quite moving. And three months after the film crew left, the Brennans assemble in a London hotel to talk about the experience. They are a lot shyer than on TV, but they were in their own home then and it's only dawning on them that they will be viewed by millions. Carol confirms this: "We didn't really ask what the consequences would be. I think it was only in the back of our heads that it would go out on national TV."

But this is not about disgruntled members of the public being taken for granted by TV producers. The Brennans have seen the finished films, think they are a fair picture and found the whole experience enjoyable and enlightening.

It is only Kayne who has a few reservations: "I started off in a bad way, getting the list of bills, and I had a bad reaction to it. I was horrid and took it out on Kyla. I do swear a bit too much. When I saw the films I said, "Is that me? What an idiot."

For sister Kyla, the arguments were the hardest part: "Usually we never argue and it was horrible, but we sorted it out by the end."

Giving up his responsibilities was tough for Mick: "There were situations I wanted to sort out, but I got into it and did let go. And then it was like a holiday. The best bit for me was seeing what the kids got out of it. They now know what's what and they realise what I do and how hard it is. We definitely all have more respect for each other."

Kayne echoes this: "When I saw all the outgoings, I thought, "Now I know why he works 12 hours a day."

So a family who turned over their lives briefly to TV are happier and closer than they ever were. Could this be a first?

DRAMA

A darkly comic series about a dysfunctional family running a funeral home may not offer the ideal role for most actresses. Rachel Griffiths would have killed for the part. Words: Vicki Power

DEAD FUNNY

Krause control

Peter Krause is well used to comedy. So he's an ideal choice for playing a mortician in E4's hit black comedy series Six Feet Under. Words: Vicki Power

As Six Feet Under's Nate Fisher, a sexy, brooding drifter and reluctant inheritor of the family funeral business, actor Peter Krause has been knocking 'em dead.

A former comedy regular, he guested on several hit shows, including Seinfeld, Beverly Hills, 90210, Ellen, 3rd Rock from the Sun and Spin City, before securing a regular spot on Cybill and a profile-raising appearance in The Truman Show. Now Six Feet Under has revealed handsome Krause as a skilful character actor in a leading man package.

Yet Krause was initially called in to audition as Nate's gay, prim brother David. When asked to try out for Nate instead, Krause says he struggled. 'I had a less clear idea of how to play Nate,' says Krause. 'I realised he was very similar to myself, and I didn't want to go in there.'

Though Krause says he once shied away from responsibility, like Nate, those days seem to be well behind him. Aside from his starring role in Six Feet, Krause became a father last November to son Roman with his girlfriend, Christine King. Parenthood, coupled with playing a mortician, has made Krause all too aware

SIX FEET UNDER has been a sparkling oasis in a desert of summer repeats. Starting on Channel 4 and E4 in June, the morbidly dark comedy about a family of LA undertakers has wowed critics and pulled in millions of viewers.

Much of Six Feet's success is down to tight acting from an ensemble of unknown actors culled from Broadway and bit parts on TV – with one exception. Australian actress Rachel Griffiths is already familiar to Brits as an Oscar nominee for Hilary and Jackie (1998) and star of Muriel's Wedding (1994) and Very Annie Mary (2001).

When we meet at a swish LA hotel, a statuesque Griffiths comes across as intelligent and direct. Dressed in designer beige trousers that accentuate her endless legs, the 34-year-old actress shrugs off the accepted Hollywood notion that moving from film to TV is a backward step. She says she leaped at the chance to work for Six Feet creator Alan Ball, the Oscar-winning screenwriter of American Beauty.

'It's not often you have an opportunity to work with a writer who seems to embody everything that you feel. I really wanted to be part of it,' says Griffiths. 'They faxed the script to me, and by the time I'd read it, in my own

of the fleeting nature of life. 'It changes your outlook,' he admits. 'Becoming a dad has made me more afraid of death than anything else in the world, because I don't want to miss anything.'

But with a job playing an undertaker, Krause can't get away from death, and admits that sometimes it's thrust into his face a little too graphically. Real morticians are always on set to advise on embalming methods. 'One time we were doing a scene and the expert said, "You've got to turn the slab around,"' recalls Krause. 'We asked why, and he said, "All the body's fluids drain towards the feet, so you've got to have the feet by the sink or else the fluids will drain onto the floor." It does get gross.'

head I was already Brenda.'

Her character, massage therapist Brenda Chenoweth, is fiercely intelligent and sensual, but unorthodox to say the least. She's had casual sex in an airport cupboard with a stranger, and her idea of a healing experience for newly bereaved boyfriend Nate (see below) and his brother David was to get them to ride on the same bus that mowed down their father.

'I don't think Brenda's everybody's cup of tea,' laughs Rachel. 'Some people say she's twisted and weird, but people who say that, I just wouldn't really relate to in real life, because I must be all those things, too.' In fact, Griffiths has been startled by her similarity to Brenda: 'One day I called the producers and asked if they'd phoned my brother to find out about me!' Her performance is so spot-on that Griffiths landed a Best Supporting Actress Golden Globe for Six Feet's first season.

Currently filming the third series in LA, Griffiths' love life is flourishing alongside her career, and she's just become engaged to an Australian artist, Andrew Taylor. Though Rachel takes up Hollywood ways when working in the US – doing yoga, having manicures and cocktails at the same time – she goes home to Sydney every two months. The youngest of three, Griffiths was brought up in Melbourne by her mother, after her father left when she was 11.

'I say I don't live in America because everything I have here is not owned, it's leased and can be liquidated,' smiles Rachel. 'You can have only one sense of homeland, and that's Oz. I'm getting a tattoo on my bum that says "Made in Australia".' Griffiths' heart may belong Down Under, but her career is well on top. cg

Six Feet never shies away from showing us the 'bodies' being readied for burial in Fisher & Sons Funeral Home, where the corpses come in two styles: fake ones made of polyurethane and rubber that cost £10,000-£20,000 each, and real people who can hold their breath for a very long time.

Viva Elvis

He may have been dead for a quarter of a century, but the songs of Elvis Presley remain as popular as ever. And Presley's confidante, Joe Esposito, assures Ivan Waterman that the King will live forever

IT'S BEEN 25 YEARS since the world mourned the death of rock 'n' roll pioneer Elvis Presley, but that didn't stop the King topping the charts for a record 18th time in June, with an irrepressibly funky remix of his tune A Little Less Conversation. Six of his songs also grace Disney's Lilo & Stitch, out later this year.

Presley was just 42 when he passed away at Graceland, in August 1977. Years of drug abuse and food bingeing had finally taken its toll. His pal and bodyguard Joe Esposito, best man at his wedding to Priscilla and the most senior member of the 'Memphis Mafia', found his lifeless body. They had known each other for 17 years, meeting soon after Elvis was drafted into the US army in Germany.

Esposito, now 64, had to look on as his friend stumbled along the drugs trail. 'After his marriage break-up to Priscilla he kind of lost heart. She could not be replaced.

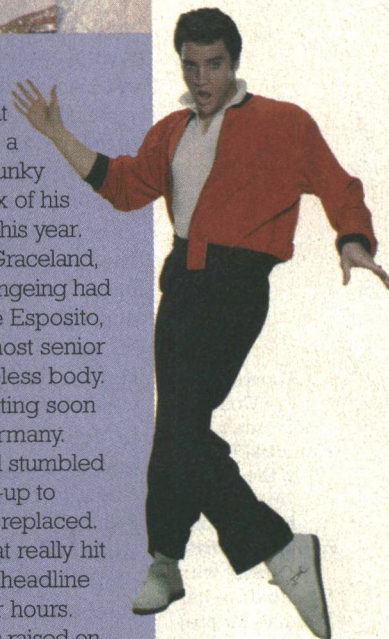

'Getting older got to him,' he continues. 'That really hit him hard. He picked up a paper and saw this headline Fat and Forty, and just slumped into a chair for hours.

'So he drank, took drugs and ate a lot. He was raised on junk food and he died eating the stuff. We were always telling him to get into shape but he never listened.'

Despite Esposito's concern about Presley's health, he never imagined his life would end in tragedy. 'Other people thought so,' he admits. 'I mean, he would have a good time, then something would bug him and he would take a pill.'

But Esposito is quick to point out that Presley never allowed his problems to affect his live performances. 'His concerts sold out and there was never an empty seat when we were in Las Vegas. But Elvis was no different from most of us. He wanted somebody to love him for being him, not Elvis Presley. He hurt a lot inside. That was tough to see.'

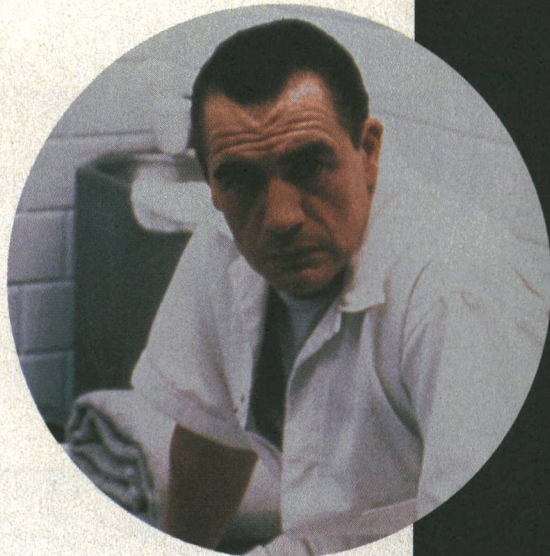

Presley's confidante became an Elvis expert and a quarter of a century later, he is just as passionate about the King. 'There will never ever be anybody like him again. Today, you have Elton John and Paul McCartney as living superstars – but Elvis will always be around.' cg

He's educated and refined. He's a gourmet, a lover of the arts, a raconteur and, in his own way, a romantic. He's also a serial killer. Admit it, Hannibal Lecter is a great character. Words: Kim Newman

Monster munch

IN JUST THREE NOVELS and as many films, Hannibal 'The Cannibal' Lecter, the epicurean psychiatrist-cum-serial killer, has become the most potent mainstream bogeyman of the past 15 years – although some fans of the character regret that in his most recent screen outing, Sky Premier's Hannibal, he seems to have become an ironic antihero rather than the completely malevolent monster he used to be.

Lecter first appeared in Thomas Harris's 1981 novel Red Dragon, which was filmed by Michael Mann as Manhunter – producer Dino De Laurentiis apparently insisted on changing the title because he had just had flops with the movies Red Sonja and Year of the Dragon. FBI profiler Will Graham (William L Petersen) is hauled out of retirement to go after the Tooth Fairy (Tom Noonan), a serial killer who preys on entire families.

To get his groove back, Graham visits the last maniac he put away, Dr Hannibal Lektor (the spelling varies, for no real reason). Brian Cox plays the doctor as a deceptively casual, deeply creepy soul wittering on about the colour of blood in the moonlight ('quite black').

Communicating through newspaper agony columns with the new killer, Lektor gives away Graham's home address – as obtained in a brilliant bit of chicanery involving a chewing gum wrapper and a plausible telephone manner – and, in the process, imperils the detective's family.

Manhunter, a steely blue mix of high-tech thriller, minimalist art movie and MTV gothic was not a hit, although it stands up better than Mann's more immediately popular Heat. And Petersen's current TV series Crime Scene Investigation owes a great deal to its template.

When Harris penned his sequel to Red Dragon, The Silence of the Lambs (published in 1988), and Jonathan Demme filmed that, no one thought of the result as a sequel to Manhunter and it became a smash, cleaning up at the Oscars.

Most of The Silence of the Lambs is cop thriller-character study, with Clarice Starling (Jodie Foster) coming into her own as she gets closer to the killer, Jame Gumb (too close, in the finale). But Hopkins inhabits his own little horror movie, languishing in a bare stone dungeon (rather than the striplight observation cell seen in Manhunter), and after the understated Cox, Anthony Hopkins (using a hard-to-define ghoulish accent) rips into the role with relish. (Incidentally, Cox and Hopkins have shared another cannibal-themed star part, Shakespeare's Titus Andronicus).

Given more to do, although still vanishing from the third act after a baroque jailbreak, Lecter displays memorable mannerisms: prissily dispensing schoolroom maxims ('all good things to those who wait') and recipe tips (human liver goes well with 'fava beans and a nice chianti'), dreamily following classical music while murdering two cops.

It took 10 years for Harris to come up with a third book, which was turned over to Ridley Scott. Hopkins returned, but Foster was replaced by Julianne Moore as an older, more compromised Starling. In the cinema and on the page, Hannibal disappointed many – but it stays on the rails a long time before getting sidetracked by a silly finale.

Hopkins' Lecter is more knowing and poised than ever, inhabiting a

'In only three movies, Hannibal Lecter has described the career arc of many a movie star'

Florentine world of art, cuisine and opera. If Manhunter is a thriller and Lambs a horror film, then Hannibal is operatic melodrama, whose killings are as extreme as anything attempted in mainstream cinema. But it does have its haunting, subtle pleasures, like a familiar face briefly formed by pigeons under the opening credits.

So in only three movies, Hannibal Lecter has described the career arc of many a movie star. Think of Kevin Spacey moving from The Usual Suspects through American Beauty to Pay It Forward: fine supporting performance, award-winning star role, self-indulgent ego trip.

And now it seems as if De Laurentiis can't resist going full circle; he's producing a Manhunter remake under Harris's original title, with Hopkins taking a bigger role in flashbacks that show how he was caught. Edward Norton co-stars as Will Graham and Ralph Fiennes plays the Tooth Fairy. What does give cause for concern, though, is that after three cinematic masters have brought Lecter to life, the project has gone to Brett Ratner – director of the Rush Hour movies, which pair Jackie Chan with acquired-taste comic actor Chris Tucker.

Hannibal Lecter once ate a flautist to improve the sound of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra – imagine what he'd do to the film-maker who inflicted Chris Tucker on the world. CG

TOP PREMIERES

Dogma

Sky Movies Premier, Friday 2nd, 10.00pm
Kevin Smith has created his own unique mythology in a series of densely interwoven, constantly cross-referencing films. And of all his work, beginning in 1994 with Clerks, Dogma is the most ambitious. It's a thought-provoking, symbol-laden meditation on Catholicism, no less – although, admittedly, the thorny theological themes are counterpointed by scenes of unashamedly puerile, foul-mouthed humour. At the centre of the controversial and complex plot are two disgraced exiled angels (Matt Damon and Ben Affleck) who are hoping to take advantage of a loophole to get back into heaven – which would have catastrophic effects.

The Replacements

Sky Movies Premier, Saturday 3rd, 8.00pm
We may be familiar with the conventions of those stirring sports movies that celebrate the underdog triumphing against all the odds, but it still doesn't make them any less enjoyable. The Replacements attempts to do for American football what Slap Shot did for ice hockey, and yields plenty of laughs. When American footballers go on strike, a coach (Gene Hackman) assembles a team of comedy misfits, including a chain-smoking spot-kicker from Swansea and a sumo wrestler. Keanu Reeves acquires himself well as a quarter-back with promise.

CLASSICS TO CATCH

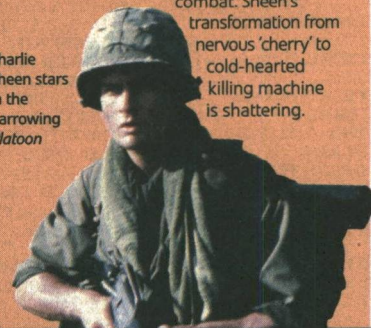

The Ghost and Mr Chicken

Sky Movies Cinema, Friday 2nd, 8.00am
The real joy of this gentle family comedy is in the performance of the twitchy, bug-eyed Don Knotts. He plays the geeky typesetter on a smalltown paper who dreams of being a reporter and winning the heart of the woman he adores. He stays at a supposedly haunted house for a night to achieve his ambition and write a story – but the results aren't quite what he was hoping for. There's a real sense of poignancy surrounding Knotts's character, never more so than when he stutters through a speech he gives at a town party thrown in his honour.

Platoon

Carlton Cinema, Thursday 22nd, 9.00pm
This Oscar-sweeping drama unflinchingly depicts the horror of the Vietnam War as seen through the eyes of a young volunteer (Charlie Sheen), whose platoon is being torn apart by its own internal battles. Director Oliver Stone napalms the senses with sequences that brilliantly convey the chaos and confusion of combat. Sheen's transformation from nervous 'cherry' to cold-hearted killing machine is shattering.

Charlie Sheen stars in the harrowing Platoon

NEWS FROM THE DARK SIDE

I've just finished watching the series finale of Dark Angel and it was even better than expected. Is there going to be a third series and are the two shown so far available on DVD or video?

N Michaels, e-mail

I'm a huge fan of Dark Angel. Jessica Alba [pictured, right] is really cool as Max and Joshua is really sweet. Imagine my dismay when I logged on to their official website today and found out that it won't be coming back on FOX in the autumn for a third season. I guess this means Sky One won't be showing it in October either. I would like to know why they've left us hanging at the end of such an amazing season finale! Will they ever make a season three? Can you find out for me, please, as it would mean a lot to this Dark Angel fan!

Blaise, e-mail

Please, please, please can you repeat the final episode of Dark Angel? I watched the whole series from episode one and loved it.

However, due to the final episode being screened on the evening of the Golden Jubilee I completely forgot to watch or tape it. I'm sure there are lots of other devoted fans who missed it due to the Jubilee celebrations.

I am so disappointed at missing what happened to Max, Logan, Alec and Joshua and I would love another chance to see it. If it can't be screened again, are there any plans to re-run the whole series on Sky One or any other channel?

M Purchase, Birmingham

A Sky One spokesperson replies: 'Unfortunately, FOX chose not to order a third series of Dark Angel, so there will be no new episodes made. There are no immediate plans to show the series finale again on Sky One, but do keep your eyes peeled for possible repeat showings. It is probable that the series will be released on DVD/video in the coming months, so keep a look out for more information on this in the future.' You can access the official website at www.darkangeltheseries.com

THEME MUSIC WINS THE ENTERPRISE

I really love the theme music of the show Enterprise. Do you know who sings it and if I can buy the CD? Thank you in advance.

Claudia, e-mail

The Enterprise theme music is entitled Where My Heart Will Take Me, it is written by Diane Warren and sung by Russell Watson. The song is on the Enterprise soundtrack, which is available to buy. Try online at www.amazon.co.uk

WEEK IN, WEEK OUT

Seven Days is one of the best shows to have been shown on Bravo, but now they have started repeating season one for the third time and I was wondering if they would ever get around to showing seasons two and three. I am getting tired of watching the same episodes over and over again.

Nicholas Fraser, e-mail

A Bravo spokesperson replies: 'Great to hear you are a fan of Seven Days, but Bravo currently has no plans to acquire series two and three of the series. The current run of Seven Days will come to an end in September.'

ONCE UPON A TIME ...

Please could you tell me why UK Gold keeps changing the time of EastEnders? They used to have the omnibus on Saturday mornings, then they stopped that and I lost the plot of what was happening. Then, about three months ago, they were showing it at 6.30pm weekdays and now they put it on earlier. They keep repeating shows like One Foot in the Grave and dinnerladies instead.

D Harding, e-mail

A UK Gold spokesperson replies: 'At the end of last year UK Gold decided to stop showing omnibus editions of The Bill, Neighbours and EastEnders (as there are a couple of opportunities to see each episode on UK Gold). We moved EastEnders to the early evening in the hope that viewers would find and enjoy this new time. But it has rated very poorly and we hope that the new afternoon time of 2.55pm will be more convenient for our viewers' EastEnders fix.'

LETTER OF THE MONTH

Seeking Monkee sanctuary

Although it surprises nearly everyone I meet (me being the tender age of 16 only) I am a huge fan of The Monkees, especially Davy Jones, and have been for about three years now. He may be 56 years old, but I think he's lovely! I am writing to you because I was wondering whether Trouble is planning to show The Monkees series again soon? Even though The Monkees may not be as popular as other shows on Trouble, it would be great to see them all again, even if it was only once! Thank you.

Sarah, Surrey

Well done, Sarah, you've won £50! A

Trouble spokesperson replies: 'We love The Monkees, too, but unfortunately the licence on the show has run out and we won't be showing any more episodes on Trouble. For more Seventies madness check out That '70s Show on the channel, a fave with lots of Monkees fans.' You can get the full lowdown on The Monkees at www.monkees.net

STARS IN YOUR EYES

Could you tell me, please, when Sky One plans to show season six of Stargate SG-1?
Iain Sharp, e-mail

There's not long to wait, Iain, as we're told the new, sixth, series will start on Sky One next month.

CRASH AND BURN

I watched Crash Palace on Sky One from the beginning of the series without missing an episode, and really enjoyed it. Imagine my disappointment, therefore, when I discovered that my video chose not to record the very last episode. Despite asking around, no one seems to have watched it. Surely there must be someone else who watched the series? Please, please, please can you tell me if there is a re-run planned or how I could get hold of a copy of the last episode.
Michelle Conway, e-mail

Crash Palace was brilliant – will there be another series? I have to see what happens next – my week was really good viewing but now all the programmes have finished within two weeks of each other – Buffy, Angel, Crash Palace and now Alias.
Meena Latchman, e-mail

Sadly, the news is not good. Sky One tells us there are no immediate plans to repeat the series and, at present, although a new series is not out of the question, it is looking unlikely.

O-TOWN CRAZY!

I'm 11 years old and I love O-Town, and I am an enormous fan of Making the Band. Can you send me loads of pictures and loads more information on them? When is Making the Band series three coming on? Tell O-Town I love them! Can you send me their autographs pleeeeeease!

Sonayna, e-mail

A Trouble spokesperson replies: "Trouble won't be acquiring series three of Making the Band but you can catch series one of the show during weekends in August, at 12.55pm and 7.20pm. Check out the TV section of www.trouble.co.uk for more information on this great behind-the-scenes show. We haven't been able to get our hands on autographs of the boys, but an exclusive official print of O-Town is on its way to you, which should make up for it!"

TITUS THE FUNNIEST

Can anyone tell me when Sky One is going to show the new series of Titus [whose cast is pictured, left] or repeat the first series? It was shown more than a year ago, and it was the funniest thing that I have seen in a long time. Please tell me – I can't be the only one who's seen it and liked it.

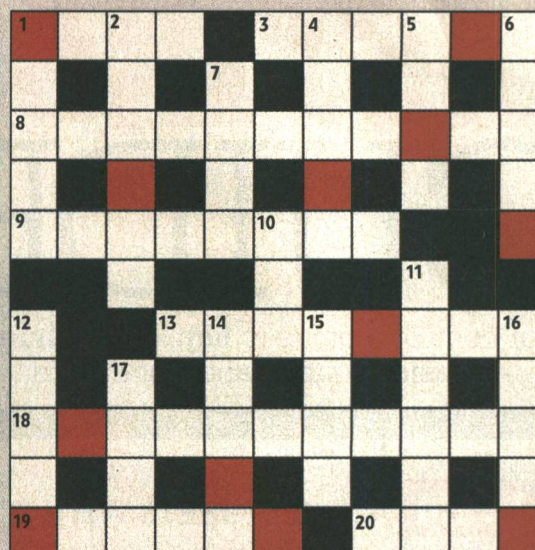

Steven, e-mail

Unfortunately, Steven, we've been informed by Sky One that the channel will not be showing the new series of Titus, and there are no immediate plans to repeat the first series. cg

MUSIC

MTV Video
Music Awards
2002

MTV, Thursday
29th, 1.00am

The innovative art of the music video is credited with reviving the flagging music industry of the Eighties, so it's only fair that the industry should pay its dues in this annual celeb-fest. This year's MTV Video Music Awards promises to be a glitzy affair held, as ever, at the New York Radio City Music Hall – but it may have a little extra gravitas. The event has been brought forward from its usual date in early September to Thursday 29

August, as a mark of respect for the anniversary of 11 September. If past years' Awards are anything to go by there'll be some spectacular live performances (remember Eminem's 100 'real' Slim Shadys?). In 2001, Fatboy Slim videos picked up six awards ranging from Best Direction to Best Cinematographer for Weapon of Choice and Michael Jackson made a live appearance.

For those who are keen enough to stay up late and watch it live, the ceremony will be screened on MTV on the 29th, but if you're running short on matchsticks, you can also see it the day after at the more civilised hour of 10.00pm.

It's a funny old thing this cooking on the telly lark. Apparently, more of us watch the abundance of cookery programmes on TV than actually prepare meals ourselves. Now at last we have the opportunity to justify our frankly lazy habit of salivating at the box instead of cooking by watching a programme that combines a look at the science of cookery with some tasty dishes.

Top young chef and food scientist Heston Blumenthal lifts the lid on such scientific mysteries as how yeast turns hops into beer or makes bread rise and discovers why some recipes work and others don't. He also looks at how, over the centuries, cooks have used science to their advantage, without really knowing it.

After revealing why food behaves as it does when we cook it, Blumenthal uses scientific principles to prepare some tempting dishes for his customers. Let's hope it's not something along the lines of one of his critically acclaimed specialities, snails in porridge.

TO THE POINT

ANDROMEDA, Sky One, Mondays until 19th, 8.00pm
Gene Roddenberry's Andromeda has really come into its own in series two, proving a hit with viewers. Now, fans of the show can not only enjoy the cracking season two finale this month, but relish a third helping on the way next month – complete with the Captain, Kevin Sorbo.

GARDEN MADNESS, UK Style, Saturday 24th and Sunday 25th, from 6.00pm
The horticultural highlight among this weekend's blooming array of programming is Alan Titchmarsh's excellent How to Be a Gardener. The green-fingered one guides us through the seasons in this eight-part series with the help of special effects from The Private Life of Plants' cameraman Tim Shepherd. 'There won't be decking, patios or a makeover in sight,' says Titchmarsh. 'We are going back to the basics of how and why things grow.'

WORKING GIRL, Paramount Comedy Channel, Friday 16th, 10.00pm
Think of the 1988 movie Working Girl, about a career-hungry secretary, and the names Melanie Griffith (oscar-nominated for her role), Sigourney Weaver and Harrison Ford may spring to mind. But look closely and there's a veritable feast of (now) famous faces on show – the likes of Oliver Platt, Kevin Spacey, David Duchovny and Ricki Lake for starters.

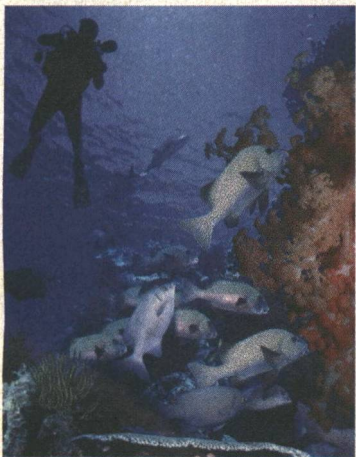

RE:BRAND, Play, weeknights from Monday 26th, 11.15pm
They say charity begins at home. MTV presenter Russell Brand is certainly doing his bit to right the wrongs in society in this series, and his approach is undeniably direct. In an effort to confront society's prejudices by confronting his own, Brand embarks on a comic and yet personal journey, which proves both psychologically and morally challenging.

1980-1989
The early 1980s saw disco remaining the dominant force, before the New Romantics took over in great numbers in 1981 and 1982. During 1983 and into 1984, acts like the Thompson Twins were discovered, and as we got further in the decade the records became more heavily produced. In the late 1980s, Stock, Aitken and Waterman achieved an almost complete domination of the pop scene, with such popular artists as Kylie Minogue, Jason Donovan, Rick Astley and Sonia.

Let the games begin

As football fans prepare themselves for the agony and the ecstasy of a new season, Jeff Stelling, of Sky Sports' The Full SP and Soccer Saturday, gives his Premiership predictions

ARSENAL

'The title-holders will be there or thereabouts at the top of the table for the entire season. It's the old story though – the players are not getting any younger, and I just wonder what sort of effect the disappointment of the World Cup will have had on French players Vieira, Henry and Wiltord. Most likely, they'll come back more determined than ever to prove what we all know: that they are world-class performers. Indeed, Henry is arguably the best striker in the Premiership.'

LIVERPOOL

'The Merseysiders have got to be organised and disciplined, and I don't think they're going to play any differently than they did last season, when they had their critics – people accusing them of being one-dimensional, which was nonsense. You don't score five against Ipswich and four at Leeds if you're one-dimensional. In some respects, England have tried to play a similar game to Liverpool. All told, Liverpool are a quality side with quality players, and they'll certainly be close contenders for the title again.'

MANCHESTER UNITED

'If they have a decent centre-half by the time this issue goes to press, then United will win the title, as their weakness last season was, unquestionably, their defence. I saw them down at Southampton last season and van Nistelrooy gave the most complete, all-round centre-forward's display I have ever seen – he was absolutely sensational. So they don't have any problems in attacking terms – they'll get bags of goals again. But they have to do something about the heart of that defence. If they do, they'll be champions.'

NEWCASTLE UNITED

'If you had told me at the start of last season that Alan Shearer was going to get 20-plus league goals and Craig Bellamy would be crowned Young Player of the Year, I'd have laughed my cap off. Newcastle were simply fantastic last season. I'm a big fan, I love the way they play, but this season is going to be a real test – Shearer's got to have another great run. Bellamy took the Premiership by surprise last season, but he's not going to have that advantage this time, so he's got it all to prove again. Robson has to get the best from loose-cannon Robert more often, too, and I hope Dyer plays a lot more games. I think they'll have another good season, although I can't see them improving on fourth place.'

LEEDS UNITED

'Leeds have had problems with the morale of some of their big-names, but new coach Terry Venables proved himself a master of relating well to star players during his Barcelona days. And that's obviously a quality that impressed Leeds when they were looking for a replacement for David O'Leary. It wasn't an ideal situation, Venables coming in just six weeks before the start of the season – I'm sure he would've wanted the whole summer to prepare. He's such a charismatic character, though, that if the team gets off to a good start, he'll soon have all the fans on his side – results will always win the crowd over, come what may. I think one of the first things he'll do is build the team from the back – all of his teams, even though they've played with a degree of style and flair, have been built on solid foundations. The job is a fantastic opportunity for him and the team has bags of potential; it would be interesting to see how much money will be made available to him. But, realistically, it will be a major achievement if Leeds finish higher than last season's fifth place.'

CHELSEA

'Here we have one of the biggest, most glamorous clubs in Britain and, according to the newspapers, Ranieri hasn't got a penny to spend. That's extremely worrying. There are other slightly worrying signs in that Hasselbaink and Gudjohnsen were fantastic for much of last season, but they both finished with particularly bad runs in front of goal. And Chelsea were so disappointing in the FA Cup Final – they're a side that flatters to deceive all the time. I keep getting abusive letters from Chelsea fans, but, I'm sorry, I'm not a fan of Zenden and Gronkjaer and I don't think they're going to do it for Chelsea frequently enough to justify the prices that the club has paid. They'll get some good results, but I just don't see the team making any significant gains on last season.'

WEST HAM UNITED

'The Hammers turned round their nightmare start to last season to finish fantastically in the top-half of the table. And

I can see them doing just as well this season; I can't see any side struggling that boasts a quality nucleus of players like David James, Joe Cole, Michael Carrick and Trevor Sinclair. It's going to be a fascinating season for Cole and Carrick, who are trying to establish themselves as England regulars, and also for Sinclair, who was brilliant in the league last season, and now looks as though he really believes he can do it at international level, too. I can see West Ham maybe even pushing for a European spot.'

ASTON VILLA

'They underachieved last season, and this campaign is a big test for Graham Taylor, one of the most experienced managers in the game, with his own distinctive way of doing things. Villa will be much more direct under Taylor, although I'm not sure that's what Villa fans will want to see. The worrying signs, for me, were when Paul Merson and Lee Hendrie, two of their best players, weren't even making the side last season. It will be a big test of Taylor's tactics and his judgement in the transfer market, which is usually spot-on. I think new-signing Allback could make a real impact.'

TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR

'I can't see anything better than a mediocre season. I wish new signing Jamie Redknapp well, because he's had terrible injury problems. But you do wonder a bit where the goals are going to come from. Sergei Rebrov's been such a misfit there, Glenn Hoddle didn't seem to rate him one jot, but they have got some promising players – the likes of Simon Davies, Ledley King. But I just don't see where the spark, or the finishing, will come from. If anything, I think Spurs might have overachieved last season.'

BLACKBURN ROVERS

'I thought Blackburn would do better last season – they came good at the end, and Andy Cole looked a terrific buy for them. They have a lot of quality players in the side, but I think they need to strengthen defensively – they conceded a few silly goals and the back four didn't have the class that was evident in the rest of the side last season. But having gained in confidence by surviving in the Premiership, as well as winning the Worthington Cup, Blackburn will want to be pushing for a place in the top 10.'

SOUTHAMPTON

'During Southampton's nightmare start to last season at their new ground I couldn't see how they'd survive – they just didn't seem to have any organisation or spirit. Then Gordon Strachan came in, and I was sceptical of what he could achieve (he'd just taken Coventry down, after all), but I was wrong and he did brilliantly. Hopefully, they can keep hold of James Beattie for a while longer because he's a real class act; he's good in the air and he's powerful. If he can remain free of injury and get his mind-set right, then he'll be a future England player. I'm not convinced about them defensively, but I can see them finishing around 11th place.'

MIDDLESBROUGH

'In the FA Cup, Boro were terrific, and they were very unlucky to lose to Arsenal in the semi-final. But in the league, mid-season, I thought they would go down – they were struggling for goals, they had no flair in the side, and they seemed to rely so much on Southgate, Ehiogu and Queudrue at the back. On the plus side, they do have some very good kids on the books, but it's a question of how quickly they come through. So there has to be change, and they need a lot more from their strikers. Alen Boksic is a fabulous player, but he only scored eight goals last season. McLaren, organisationally, is outstanding, and I think they've got sufficient strength in defence to ensure they don't struggle.'

FULHAM

'A team with big ideas last season, but, in the end, they simply could not score. Obviously, that needs to be worked on. We need to see more from Steve Marlet. He's had the time to settle in – he picked up a bad injury when he first came over – but now's the time to prove he is an international striker, and I have my doubts. And, of course, this season Fulham will be lodging at Loftus Road, and they could find it a bit of a problem getting used to that early on. It's a big test for Tigana. He insists on playing flair football, but from time to time you need to play route one and hit the opposition a bit harder.'

CHARLTON ATHLETIC

'Another season of consolidation, another mid-table finish, which Charlton fans might not be happy with, but they ought to be, considering how far the club have come. The Addicks are very sound defensively: Dean Kiely is a top-notch goalkeeper – he's unlucky that Shay Given is just a shade ahead of him in the Ireland squad – and new signing Gary Rowett is a decent enough defender. But the team were hit by injuries last season, with midfielders Claus Jensen and Mark Kinsella missing whole chunks of it, and they are key players; Kinsella showed that in the World Cup for Ireland and Jensen had Denmark's best shot on goal in their defeat to England. If they steer clear of injuries, and if Jason Euell really establishes himself as a top-flight striker, then Charlton will do all right.'

EVERTON

'Everton have made the first step towards turning around their fortunes – they've changed their manager. Many people said that David Moyes was destined for the top, and now he's got a brilliant chance to prove that. Certainly, at the end of last season, his impact was tremendous. And I think they'll have a good season. You'll see them play with a lot more flair; Moyes is a hard taskmaster, but he has always liked flair players. So Everton will be a better side to watch. They could even finish in the top 10 – and that's been a long time coming.'

BOLTON WANDERERS

'I really admired the way Sam Allardyce went for it at the end of last season when Bolton started to slide down the table by bringing in the Djorkaeffs of this world; Bolton were so determined to survive. Their new signing, Nigerian international Jay Jay Okocha, certainly looked the part in the World Cup, but I wonder how he'll fare in the Premiership week in, week out. He looks a bit of a luxury player to me – and Bolton can't afford luxuries. Ricketts' start to last season was wonderful, but his later form was poor – and you wonder who's going to get the goals he did, because it was those he scored at the outset that ensured Bolton's survival. I think they're going to find it incredibly hard, and it could all end in tears for The Trotters.'

SUNDERLAND

'There's a danger that Sunderland could do a Leicester and see their bad end-of-season run continue into the new campaign. I spoke to manager Peter Reid before their last game in May, and he hinted that the team was going to change its style for this season; he felt they'd spent long enough on their predictable long ball to Quinn. To change their play is a big test. Have they got the players to cope with such a change? Claudio Reyna's a quality player, McAteer is a decent enough performer at this level, but I think they're desperately short of quality in key areas. Sunderland need major surgery, otherwise it'll be a season-long struggle again.'

MANCHESTER CITY

'Of the three promoted sides, City certainly look best equipped to survive. When he was at Newcastle and then at Fulham, Kevin Keegan brought in players solely to help him win promotion – and he's not afraid of being ruthless and discarding them to bring in others who will help fulfil his next ambition. That's exactly what he's done with City – he's said thanks to the guys who got him to the Premiership, then he's brought in the Anelkas of this world. You can't fault the club for ambition – they've spent and spent, and I hope they'll be rewarded for it. It's a gamble, but City obviously believe they belong in the big time. They'll be tested defensively to the full, and they will be cavalier at times, as befits a Keegan side. Keegan would accept survival and perhaps a good run in one of the cup competitions, and I can see them finishing 12th or 13th.'

WEST BROMWICH ALBION

'The Baggies did brilliantly last season, but the key to their success was the fact that they nicked so many games 1-0. And if they couldn't score lots of goals in the First Division, there's no way they're going to rack them up in the Premiership. And I'd be surprised if they kept many clean sheets. How many of their players would get into any other Premiership side? Not many. And they've got hardly any money to spend. I think all this adds up to the bottom for West Brom. Unless manager Gary Megson reveals himself as an absolute genius, I just don't see them staying up.'

BIRMINGHAM CITY

'Despite the fact that Birmingham manager Steve Bruce was a great defender, he has a reputation for building flair attacking sides, and Birmingham will try to play with a degree of flair – but ultimately they'll need to battle and do a Bolton. They'll need to get off to the sort of start that Bolton had last season – get those points in early then hang on like crazy. I'm not convinced they can do that – the gulf between the First Division and the Premiership is so vast, and let's not forget that Birmingham weren't promoted automatically. So I just can't see them surviving – as much as I would like them too.

DANNY MILLS

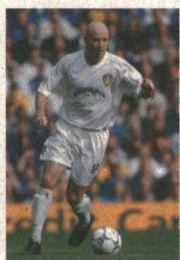

New season, new manager. In the first of his monthly columns, the Leeds United and England defender looks forward to the challenge of the season ahead

THERE IS AN UNPREDICTABILITY in football that makes the game so addictive – whether you're a fan on the terraces or a player in the heat of battle, you never quite know what twists or turns lay in wait. And from a personal perspective, fate has dealt me some unexpected hands these past few months. The disappointment of the suspensions that became an unwanted addition to my repertoire last season soon subsided as the euphoria of making the England World Cup team, and my subsequent performances in the tournament, came to the fore.

Then, having just arrived home following our exertions in the Far East, I was greeted with the news that Leeds United had parted company with our manager, David O'Leary. To say I was shocked is an understatement – like the rest of the lads, I had no idea that his departure was on the cards. There has been much speculation surrounding the reasons why he left, but we must now look forward to the new season under our new coach, although I do wish Mr O'Leary all the best for the future.

The appointment of Terry Venables brought to an end an uncertain fortnight at Elland Road. The former England coach certainly has a high-calibre group of international players to work with and I'm sure he'll be looking to win the overdue silverware that our loyal fan base deserve. His early appointment also ensures that he'll have time to make an impression on the team before our opening game against Manchester City.

There has been talk in the media that our performances of the past couple of seasons have not been of the required standard. This grates with me a little, as we've established ourselves as one of the top five sides in the country and have reached a Champions League semi-final. To me, all those facts add up to a group of players moving in the right direction, not an imbalanced team with deep-rooted problems – criticism that has been levelled against us.

'In our position, there is no room for error – we want to win the Premiership this season, make no mistake about that'

In our position, there is no room for error – we want to win the Premiership this season, make no mistake about that, but with last season's top three likely to be challenging again, and the re-emerging forces of Chelsea and Newcastle eager to make their presence felt, we will need to be on our game from the very start.

Arsenal, for me, are the yardstick against which we should be measuring ourselves: they play attractive, attacking football but maintain a ruthless streak that all winners possess. Even in the face of adversity, they never know when they are beaten and it's those attributes that we must strive to reach. Consistency wins you championships and last season, our form let us down at the turn of the year, ultimately costing us a chance of the championship. Until that point we had been spoken about in glowing terms but if you lose a couple of games, it's imperative that you bounce straight back. Unfortunately, we failed to do that and never quite recovered.

Yet from what I've seen on the training ground this summer, there is a steely determination to prove the doubters wrong. Such is the calibre of our squad that many of the lads were on World Cup duty and excelled themselves at the very highest level.

To play in the finals was an experience I'll never forget as I've grown to become part of the England 'family'. Having played such an important role and established a sense of belonging, it took some time for the pain of our exit against Brazil to disperse, but from a personal point of view, I felt a great sense of pride in my performances.

I would like to think I've answered those critics who had lambasted me for my disciplinary problems last season and under some provocation this summer – namely against Argentina – I held my composure and remained totally focused on the task in front of me. From a purely footballing perspective, I felt I grew into the role given to me by Mr Eriksson and have emerged a better player for the experience. To face the likes of Roberto Carlos and Kily Gonzalez head-on, and to have emerged (almost) unscathed, gives me a great deal of satisfaction. A regular run of games also built up my confidence down the right flank, meaning my attacking instincts were kept sharp.

It is only inevitable that you hit a feeling of anti-climax after so many weeks of being on a constant high, but now I must ensure I maintain the levels reached in the Far East to remain in Mr Eriksson's thoughts. It seems incredible that, having reached the pinnacle, playing against Brazil in a World Cup quarter-final, in front of a huge global audience, I now have even more targets in front of me – that addiction would appear to be getting more serious! cg
